

Several days after Snort went to heaven, Savy, Sunne, and Daddy were cleaning out the garage. All of them were feeling very sad.

“Hey, I have a great idea!” Daddy said. “Why don’t we plant a tree in Snort’s memory?”

“Cool! Can we get it today?” Savy asked.

“Please?” Sunne added, jumping up and down.

“We sure can! Go get Mommy!” Daddy answered.

They all jumped into the van, and off they went to the tree farm.

When they got home, everyone worked together to plant Snort's new tree.

Daddy dug the hole, and Mommy set the tree gently into the ground. Sunne helped push the dirt around the tree's roots. Savy made sure it had plenty of water so it would grow tall and strong.

“Snort taught me loyalty. She followed me everywhere. She taught me to be helpful when my loved ones need me.”
